Applications

Applications are invited for funding through the Crown Estate's 2002 Scottish Coastal Community Projects Scheme.

This is the fourth year of the scheme, which has already benefited sixteen coastal community projects throughout Scotland, from Shetland to Galloway, Harris to the Moray Firth. These projects have ranged from the restoration of buildings to provide information points and ferry waiting rooms, through the improvement of coastal access facilities, to the provision of navigational and safety measures.

The annual scheme awards, which have been increased this year, aim to give recognition and financial support of up to £10,000 each to projects that will enhance Scotland's coastal communities' and public enjoyment of the Scottish coast. Any coastal community in Scotland may apply.

Projects must be for community or public benefit and must relate in some way to Crown Estate foreshore or seabed. Eligible schemes might include access improvements such as slipways, jetties or paths; environmental improvements; information points, visitor centres or interpretation facilities; the improvement of safety or navigational facilities; or research, restoration and education projects.

Scottish Coastal Community Projects Scheme 2001 – successful projects:

- Bays of Harris Association – funding towards the improvement and extension of Flodabay jetty
- Lochgoilhead Jetty Trust – funding towards a new bridge and pontoon to provide special needs access
- Applecross Community Council – funding towards navigational improvements on the approach to the anchorage and pier
- Cromarty Arts Trust – funding towards the conversion of a bothy into an interpretation and visitor centre
- Whale and Dolphin Conservation Society – funding towards a new exhibition on the wildlife of the Moray Firth

Contact us:

The Scottish Coastal Community Projects Scheme will provide between 25 and 75 percent of a project's total costs, so some project match funding is required. All suitable proposals will be considered and innovative ideas are positively encouraged. The closing date for applications is 21st October 2002.
